A few years ago I found myself in a situation not too different from your own. I desperately wanted to learn how to master the piano. Unfortunately, my results were dismal. Some of them were so mired down in fancy words and technicalities that it was a miracle I ever got past the first chapter! The next morning I furiously began to read through all of the piano mastery books that I had purchased over the past three years and take down the pertinent notes. I didn't stop there either. I swallowed my pride and enlisted the help of several professional acquaintances who were known for their love of the piano. It took awhile to sort through all of the information I had gathered and compile the notes I received from the experts I consulted, but when I was finished I sat back and was completely stunned. Right here in front of me was the information that I had been seeking all along! From the notes I had taken from several articles on the subject of piano mastery, as well as my own interviews, I had comprised a comprehensive compendium on the subject of piano mastery. These strategies not only worked, but the results were completely astonishing. I was completely able to understand all of the great works that had previously seemed so confusing. As my success with piano mastery grew, I started to feel guilty. I knew there were a lot more people out there who wanted the same solutions I had found. Somehow, it just didn't seem right to keep it to myself. One night as I made some changes to my book, I wondered how many other people might have the same problem?
