Are You Wasting Time On Pointless Website Updates? Here's An Easy Way To Discover Exactly When Your Website Gets Spidered By The Major Search Engines, So You Can Target Your Site Updates For Maximum Benefit! Do you regularly update your websites to make them more attractive to the search engines? And did you realize that your probably wasting a lot of time and effort in doing this? Search engines send out "spiders" that crawl through websites in order to find all the web pages so they can be listed on the search engine. These spiders are sent out to re-visit sites at irregular intervals and the search engine listings are then updated. This update can result in a site being added or removed from the listings as well as affecting its position in search results. So if you regularly update your site, you need to update it in-between spider visits. Updating at any other time is just a waste of time and effort. But how do you know that a spider has visited your site? Search Engine Detector offers a simple way to detect spider visits, automatically notifying you by email that a spider has visited. This means you can perform updates when they are useful (i.e. after a spider has visited) rather than continually performing unnecessary updates that never get seen by the search engines. This can save you unnecessary work, while allowing you to optimize your sites for search engine benefits. Search Engine Detector makes it quick and easy to detect search engine spiders on any website you own. Simply run the simple setup tool: Enter the domain name of your website, your email address (where you will receive emails notifying you that a search engine has visited your site) and the subject for the emails (which defaults to "Search Engine Detected"). If you leave the "spider names" box blank, the software detects just Googlebot (the Google spider). But you can enter the names of any spiders you want into the "spider names" box (as many names as you want) and the software will report their visits to your site. The software provides a list of all the different search engine spider names. You can choose to have the script monitor just your home page, monitor selected pages (you enter the file names of the pages into the "File names" box) or monitor all pages. Once you have entered your details, the setup tool will generate a script file (along with a special .htaccess file), which you upload to your web host. That's all there is to it! The script will continually monitor for search engine spiders and email you whenever a spider visits your site. Master Resale Rights!
