Its pitch black. The only light is the ghostly glow from the numbers on your clock. Eyes wide open, you think about the blackout drape you ordered and installed in your bedroom. It sure is working. Its plenty dark. Glad you found in that catalogue and bought it with your credit card. Suddenly here comes another thought, Did I pay the credit card bill? Uh oh, and I cant forget to pay the mortgage. Its due the day after tomorrow . . . or is it next week? When do I take the dog to the vet? On and on it goes. You need to sleep and you cant shut off the endless cacophony that keeps replaying over and over in your sleepless mind. After hours of lying there wide awake, you finally drift off into a light sleep. Before you know it the alarm blasts you awake at 6:00 a.m. and another stressful day begins. Tortuous traffic, unpaid bills, fear of layoffs and all the various burdens begin to pile up and you have to face it all with little or no sleep. We all suffer from some loss of sleep. However, it is usually just one or two nights and only happens on occasion. When loss of sleep becomes the norm you should pay attention. This is genuine insomnia rears its ugly head.
