Help Visitors Subscribe To Your Newsletter Stop Hoping That Visitors Will Sign Up For Your Newsletter It was a long time coming....to learn on your own how to build your email subscriber list. You tried this; you tried that. You bought lists and traded lists. Are you engaged in selling products or services online? Are you finding it difficult to build your ezine or newsletter subscriber base? Have you yearned for an easier way to get visitors to subscribe? You're Not Alone In case you are unaware or are just getting your first website set up, one of the single KEYS to long term ebusiness success is to use email publications (also known as ezine or newsletter) to stay in the top of the mind of your potential and existing clients. Every single successful and profitable internet marketer uses ezines or newsletters to prove their knowledge, earn readers' trust and promote their products or services. Tough Lessons Learned The problem is how to get those website visitors to subscribe to your publication so that you CAN prove your expertise and promote to them. You have to get them to subscribe of course! But that is much more difficult than it appears on the surface. As we get our start in internet marketing, we buy all kinds of ebooks and subscriptions to learn how the 'experts' did it. We try our best to implement their suggestions. If you are like me, my first web site, I just put up a hyperlink with the word 'subscribe' on it and expected visitors to come in droves. For full disclosure, I didn't buy any of the ebooks, tapes or how to subscriptions. After all, I had worked at autotraderand they are one of the most sophisticated internet operations there is, right? So I had a couple friends in the marketing department give me the 'skinny' on how to market my first web site. Bad move. Corporate marketers are STILL figuring out how to drive sales on the internet. They are so far behind in modern marketing practices, it's not even funny. But I was just a programmer and they were the 'experts', right? Long story short: 6 months went by and I had about 15 subscribers. Not very encouraging, and certainly not profitable. But I got in the pool, so to speak. I did it and learned. More Attempts Next, I finally broke down and bought a couple ebooks on website marketing. I changed my newsletter subscription language, form, added an autoresponder and so forth. I was getting plenty of 'traffic' (as if any old traffic was good enough!). Things picked up. My subscriber base began to grow. But it never really got any scale. Not until I added some software offering my visitors an option to subscribe to my newsletter upon their landing on my website. Immediate List Growth My list began to grow at twice the volume on the first day! I added two useful bonuses in the following weeks and even more growth. It was at least 200 growth with each incremental step I put in. You Don't Have To Experience The Pain that I did by experimenting. The experience was so powerful, that I decided to package the web site tool into an easy to use, single screen piece of software.
