Niche Marketing: Busting The Saturation Myth PERSONAL USE RIGHTS ONLY! If Youre Still Struggling to Find Your Place in Online Marketing, You Need to... Stop Trying to Be Everything to Everyone, and Learn the Power of a Focused Business! New marketers make a lot of mistakes. Bad copy, faulty website navigation, horrible color choices, and spammy emails are just a few of them. I made a few of these faux pas myself, and I bet you did, too. But theres one killer mistake that it can be nearly impossible to recover from - not defining your niche. There was a time (not that long ago!) when you could build a website around a market, like weight loss and make a ton of money. Now, though, a market is far too broad for you to make an impact. You need to narrow your focus. Successful marketers today use a laser-targeted approach to business - niche marketing. With niche marketing, you arent going head to head with the big boys in the weight loss market, instead, youre doing battle with smart business owners like yourself in the smaller, but more profitable, niches within a larger market. And make no mistake, there are plenty of niches within every market. For example, within the weight loss market you might choose to target the raw foods niche, or the high protein niche (Dr. Atkins certainly does well with that one!), or even the elliptical trainer niche. The possibilities are nearly endless. If you know how to approach it. Theres More to Niches than Long-Tail Keywords The Business Dictionary probably defines niche marketing in the simplest terms: Niche marketing is aimed at being a big fish in a small pond instead of being a small fish in a big pond. But simply choosing a niche in which you can be the big fish is not enough. You also need to research, test, focus your marketing efforts, drive traffic, and - of course - satisfy your customers. This special report, Niche Marketing: Busting the Saturation Myth, is designed to teach you everything you need to know about niche marketing. Its not complicated, but you do need to get all the pieces together - in the right order - to make a profit in any niche. If youve studied niche marketing at all, youve probably seen a lot of advice about choosing keywords. But that seems to be where everyone stops. Its not enough to just choose the right keywords. Thats great for a short burst of traffic and some quick cash, but its not sustainable. Without all the other pieces of the puzzle, youll end up being a small fish in that small pond, and some bigger fish will come along and have you for lunch! Time to step up your efforts and really build a niche marketing business instead of just a short-term solution. Ill show you how... Niche Marketing from the Beginning...
