You Can Learn The Tricks, Tips And Hints To Improve Your Coffee Experience Today! Dear Friend, Everyone loves tea and coffee. Tea and coffee are cultural traditions for many of us. The Japanese have their tea rituals. The British are known for their love of tea. In the Southern USA, tea is served cold with plenty of sugar. Coffee is a critical component of countless morning routines and evening periods of relaxation. The Turks, the Italians and even the ubiquitous Starbucks on every corner serve up coffee by the gallon. It's been that way for well over a thousand years. Tea goes back to the beginning of known human history and you can find records of coffee in the hieroglyphics of ancient Egypt. You'd think that by now most of us would be able to really enjoy a perfect cup of our favorite beverage. After a thousand years, you'd guess that we'd know everything we needed to brew a perfect pot of coffee or to make a truly satisfying cup of tea. Somewhere between the experiences of our ancestors and Mr. Coffee, however, we seem to have lost our way. Our coffee is too strong. Our tea is watery and dull. We don't know which coffee varietal to choose to make a perfect "cup o' Joe." We delude ourselves into thinking everything ground up and stuffed into a can on a supermarket shelf is "good enough." We learn how to order "venti triple-mocha skinny lattes" and don't realize that we're trading the superficial satisfaction of sugar when we might be enjoying the rich, hearty flavor of great coffee. We love tea and coffee. The amazing thing is that we do a lousy job of making it. Imagine just how spectacular it could be if we actually did things the RIGHT way?
