Is your relationship over? All is not lost! Discover How To Claim Back Your Ex And Re-Ignite That Missing Spark In Your Relationship Don't throw in the towel too early but be realistic and slow moving in how you progress forward if you have hopes of getting your ex back. The first instinct most people have after a breakup is to react immediately, and nearly always works out to be a mistake. It is best to allow things to cool off; each party needs time to think, reflect, and evaluate. The cool off and reflective stage is critical to any ended relationship. It can be the single deciding factor in whether the love relationship itself is salvageable. No matter how difficult it is, refrain from taking actions you'll most surely regret later. The reflective period does not necessarily have a time limit. It may take days, weeks, or even months. Consider it a time of healing and a time to put things into perspective. It's most important during this cooling off phase that you use your time to reflect on the factors that may have caused the relationship to end. Want to know more?
