Just recently, The Wall Street Journal made the biggest changes in its 113-year history - to make it easier for you to access this special knowledge. We've added color and made design improvements in every section and, as a result, today's Journal is fresher, more reader-friendly - and more useful to you, more quickly. The day's vital stories stand out to help you select those that interest you. The best-read front page in America. Right now, I'm looking at page one of the Journal, the best-read front page in America. The excellent layout is unchanged, but it's a faster read. It combines all the important news of the day with in-depth reporting. Every phase of business news is covered -- business forecasts, breaking stories, politics -- stories from Washington, Moscow, Frankfurt, Tokyo -- item after item that could affect you, your job, your future. Now, if you're jammed for time, a 10-minute scan will set you up for the day. An improved Wall Street Journal and the business of life. More than just business, the world's most trusted source of business news and information has also added Personal Journal, a major new section appearing every Tuesday through Thursday. It taps the world's largest staff of business news experts for information of personal benefit to you. Not only personal investing and personal technology, but careers, health and fitness, family, and everything about the business of life. The battle for the consumer Marketplace gives you revealing insights into how consumers are thinking and spending -- and how companies are competing for market share. Plus coverage of law, media, technology, marketing, and the challenges of managing smaller companies. ...the best source for news...about your money. Today's Journal is also the single best source for news and statistics about your money. In the Money & Investing section, there are helpful charts, now even easier to grasp in color -- and three of America's most carefully scrutinized and influential investment columns -- Abreast of the Market, Heard on the Street, and Your Money Matters. So, every section, column and feature that contributes to making today's Journal the final authority in business news is right there, where it's always been -- with two major additions: A new section, Personal Journal, that's all about the business of life -- and design changes to make the Journal easier to use and more useful to you.
