Wind music flourished in the 18th Century, and no greater master of it can be found than here, with exuberant and sonically splendid performances by some of the best players ever to set heart and lip to the genre. 34 MP3 Songs CLASSICAL: Mozart, CLASSICAL: Chamber Music Show all album songs: The Wind Serenades of Mozart plus Cosi fan tutte The Marriage of Figaro Songs Details: The Wind Serenades of Mozart, Plus Cosi fan tutte and The Marriage of Figaro "It is sublime...it is hard to imagine a better set of performances with better sonics." -American Record Guide, 1991 The wind octet consisting of pairs of oboes, clarinets, horns, and bassoons was one of the most popular instrumental combinations of the Classic and early Romantic eras. It had a special name Harmoniemusik which only later became used as a general term for any combination of wind instruments. The three original works by Mozart recorded here are without question among the finest (and most serious) works ever conceived for the medium. Arrangements of operas, such as these by Giovanni Went (Johann Nepomuk Wendt), were commonly made in the late 18th and early 19th centuries, primarily as courtly entertainment. In a performance like this, the specific dramatic situation of each aria seems insignificant. Meant as entertaining background music, these excerpts should be joyously familiar to many listeners. 2002 Robert Levin Track List: Serenade No. 10 in B-flat, K. 361/370a for 12 winds contrabass 1.
