Not even his father Robert Watkins Senior (CEO of Watkins Broadcast 88.1 FM and TV 33/Comcast 20) believed that Junior could succeed in this endeavor. Senior felt that Junior's talent would be better served helping out the Broadcast Company with editing and programming responsibilities. After a bitter disagreement regarding his job function within the Broadcast company Junior left the family business. Now on his own, Junior faced more challenges. It became even more difficult to get anyone to believe in his dream. The times for Junior became turbulent, hence the company name Turbulence was created.
