From: FBM Date: Tuesday, September 04, 2007 Dear Professional Marketer, You and I know that selling information online is a very lucrative business. That is the reason why a lot of home business people and even seasoned marketers are online selling information... and are making a fortune from it! Now it's a small wonder why many leading Internet Entrepreneurs preach the importance of having your very own Info Product. Because having your own Info Product allows you to have the following advantages over most conventional businesses - PLUS MORE! Your profit margin is close to 100 - with the exception of the merchant transaction fee for every sale you make, you get to keep the rest of the profit. No need for manual delivery - it is very possible for you to automate your delivery process, allowing your customers to download your digital product after the sale is made without having to involve you in the process. No need to stock - because of the duplicable nature of digital products, there is absolutely no need to re-create them let alone keep inventory! You can spawn a series of profit centers - You can also make even money from your existing customers through affiliate links, advertisements, and more! Also, the nature of the Internet prones your customer to take action almost instantly. This is one advantage that published books do not have. These Are Just Some Advantages... But You Get The Idea! But There Is A Problem... ... and it's called product creation or product development. Now let's face it: NOT everybody is gifted in writing. As long as you lack the flair for writing, creating your own Info Product can prove to be more of a problem than a challenge. And even if you can write, creating your own Info Product can be a real pain. Sure, you can hire ghostwriters to relieve you of this burden but do you have the deep pockets for it? Okay, So

What' The Best Solution? May I suggest that skipping your product creation job altogether and... Own The
