From: Edmund Loh & Tracy Yates Today's Date: Friday, August 29, 2008 Dear Infopreneur In The Making, If any of the following matches your idea of 'a perfect business to be in' (tick any that applies) then I invite you to read every line of this letter. Affordable to start to operate - within the budget of a few hundred dollars only, Does not require administration and transaction is automated, Can make truckloads of income streams -- up-front and back-end, Easy to create your own product from scratch, Doesn't require stock inventory to keep and deliver products, Profit margin as high as 95-100, and Your business can be automated. If any one or all of the above criteria of an ideal Online Business appeals to you, then you might do well to consider selling Information Products. "Why sell Information Products?" you ask. Well, here's the fact: Information is the best selling commodity in the Internet marketplace. We are embracing the Information Age. Thus it is not a surprise that Information Products (especially E-Books in particular) are the best-selling entities in the Online marketplace. "Most Perfect Business... Or Is It?" Okay so there are no business free from problems. While the information market is lucrative, the low barrier of entry has allowed room for many people to create a massive volume of low quality products that meet little or no demand. And consider these too: Not everyone is gifted with a flair for writing. Not everyone are highly sought-after experts (or thanks to low self esteem). And certainly, not everyone can produce a hot selling Digital Product. As you can see, having to sell your own Information Products successfully has its ifs and buts. And it takes everything to work. One cannot even afford to fail at the last hurdle in selling information online. Being weak in at least one aspect can affect your business dramatically, and it won't be a nice drama on stage, I tell you, especially if you are horrible actor! In short, you are one skill away from wealth. "Discover How To Turn Ideas Into Cash Raking Products With My Digital Product Creation Strategies..." 27 Letter-Sized Pages, PDF Format, Instant
